SENATE SUCCESES

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, after a few more moments of gathering papers, in 10 or 15 minutes, we will likely be closing. We are working on some of the final nominations and the nomination process.

Before we leave for the August recess, I will take a moment to reflect on the Senate's tremendous productivity over the last month. We can all be very proud of the progress we made in this Senate over the last 4 weeks. We have had several agenda items.

First, we worked hard to secure our homeland, to secure America's homeland. Specifically, we passed, this month, both the Homeland Security appropriations bill, the spending bill, as well as the Foreign Investment and National Security Act of 2006 which strengthens the Committee on Foreign Investment in the United States, the so-called CFIUS.

Over the past 3 days, we made substantial progress on the Department of Defense appropriations bill. We were unable to finish it today, but we have a glidepath to finish it within 2 days after we return from the recess.

The Senate's productivity this past month goes way beyond securing America's homeland. We have taken action to ensure that the homeland we secure is a homeland we value that is worth securing. We have taken action to secure America's prosperity by passing an important bill, the Water Resources Development Act, an act which focuses on building that infrastructure along the waterways, and by passing the Gulf of Mexico Energy Security
